

Evaluating Local Public Health Practice

Sharing our learning from the Public Health Practice Evaluation Scheme

Where:

F009, Wolfson
Building, Queen's
Campus Stockton,
Durham University

When:

15 March 2017,
11.30am – 2.30pm

Find out more:

On the 'Events' page of the Fuse website
www.fuse.ac.uk

Background

To support the challenges faced by front line public health practitioners, the NIHR School for Public Health Research (SPHR) operates the Public Health Practice Evaluation Scheme (PHPES), in collaboration with Public Health England. The scheme has enabled practitioners in North East England to work with researchers from Fuse (the Centre for Translational Research in Public Health) to evaluate innovative local projects, such as babyClear, Citizens Advice health support and Ways to Wellness.

The aim of the event

This event will showcase successful collaborations between public health practitioners and researchers through PHPES, sharing knowledge and best practice from these collaborations. We will also look at future opportunities for collaborative research in the next phase of the School.

Who is it for?

The event will bring together academics, practitioners and policy makers interested in developing collaborative evaluations of local interventions.