

Fuse Quarterly Research Meeting

Intensive Advice Services: What impact do they have on health?

Coach Lane Campus West, Old Gym, Hall D, Northumbria University
Thursday 13 July, 1.00pm - 4.30pm

Overview

This event will bring together policy makers, practice partners and academics to share the findings of a recent research project exploring the health impact of intense advice services. An initial specific focus will be on the work of the Citizen's Advice, with table discussions broadening this focus to explore and further understand the commonalities and differences between advice services and their impact on health.

Who should attend?

The event will be of particular interest to those providing or referring to advice services, voluntary organisations, commissioners of public health services, local authority public health teams and researchers with an interest in advice services.

The event will be co-facilitated by members of the Fuse research team at Northumbria University and Citizens Advice staff based in Gateshead.

Programme:

1.00pm	Registration
1.15 - 1.30pm	Welcome and introduction
1.30 - 2.00pm	Plenary: Dr Heather Brown, deputy lead of the Fuse Health Inequalities Research Programme
2.00 - 2.30pm	Cap-a-pie theatre group performance
2.30 - 3.00pm	Refreshment break
3.00 - 3.30pm	Exposing the impact of advice services on health: Fuse team at Northumbria University
3.30 - 4.15pm	Round table discussions
4.15 - 4.30pm	Close

Further information and booking details can be found on the 'Events' section of the Fuse website www.fuse.ac.uk